MORE MEN GOING BACK ON PAYROLL

Positive proof of employment increase in the state of California is evidenced by the facts given in the May Bank of America Business Review just off the press. Twelve hundred and fourteen industrial plants showed a 7 per cent increase in the last sixty days and the resumption of canning activities naturally solved a large part of California's unemployment problem for the next six months. Already this group (foods, beverages and tobacco) show a statewide increase of 34.5 per cent.

The Twelfth Federal Reserve District again leads the nation in retail sales. Of the 544 stores reporting in the United States for the past thirty days—117 of them were in the western district Unit sales averaged smaller in dollars but volume is increasing noticeably.

The latest figures on imports and exports to and from California ports show the total exports from San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego to be $11,440,233 for a thirty day period and imports through the same customs districts totaled $8,514,630—an incerase of approximately half a million dollars.

A state wide review of the petroleum industry compiled by the analysis experts employed by the Bank of America is comprehensive and so written that it gives the layman an understanding of this major California industry. It is important for Californians to realize that of the 850,275,000 barrels of petroleum produced in the United States in 1931, California ranked second, exceeded only by Texas. The article in the Bank of America Review also gives a yearly production record of all major oil fields in California since 1920.

"Forget them not," as years go by,
On our remembrance they rely;

Its solace—crippled, blind, they try
To find on earth the peace they know

LOCAL BALL TEAM AGAIN VICTORIOUS

With Pitcher Gus Ford in great form, the Daly City Eagles' baseball team took the fast Municipal Railway team into camp last Sunday at the Jefferson Union high school grounds, 4 to 2. The game was a battle between two left-handers, Ford and Sanator, with the Eagles' classy flinger having much the better of the duel, allowing no hits until the sixth inning, and striking out fourteen of the Muny boys.

The local boys did some real hitting in the pinches, the stick work of Perotti, hard hitting fist sacker, being great. The Muny boys, on the strength of a long string of victories, were favorites to win, but the local team is going to be tough to defeat with the brand of pitching their southpaw hurler is dishing out.

On this coming Sunday, at 12:30, the local team will play the Mission Reds A, at Jefferson High grounds.

Following is the box score for last Sunday's game:

SILVER WEDDING CELEBRATION

Mr. and Mrs. N. Wegner, of Crocker avenue, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last Monday evening in their home. The color scheme of decoration was carried out in green, white and yellow. The happy couple received many lovely and useful silver gifts, and a complete set of sterling silverware. Some relatives and friends in Germany sent gifts to make the day a happy one. GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

Last Friday was a big day for Jefferson elementary school. The Jefferson girls won the three-cornered meet from Woodrow Wilson and Crocker, and after long and anxious hours it was discovered that the Jefferson boys had tied with Woodrow Wilson for first honors. The boys' score was: Jefferson, 44; Woodrow Wilson, 44; Crocker, 1. Girls: Jefferson, 35; Crocker, 27; Woodrow Wilson, 17.

High point men were Henry Mendola and Fred Balletto with 19 1-2 points each. Albert Agreti came third with ten points. Woodrow Wilson boys gathered seven first places and Jefferson three, but Jefferson had most of the second and third places to her credit.

Mrs. Hewner, Domestic Science teacher for the district, gave a most delightful luncheon to the faculty and superintendent of Woodrow Wilson school. Miss Dorothy Barrett and Miss Marshall, demonstrator for Wesson Oil, were guests.

Miss Marshall was at Woodrow Wilson school all last week demonstrating salad-making to our cooking classes.

Blasting Operations Cause Protest by Local Residents

On Monday evening, May 23, the City Council met in regular session, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company asked permission to install a 2-inch gas main in the westerly sidewalk area of Junipero Serra boulevard, starting at the south side of Eighty-seventh street, and permission was granted.

A number of citizens living in the 200 block of Wellington avenue complained of the heavy blasting done by the Market Street Railway in their quarry nearby. This blasting, the claim was made, has cracked the plate glass in their homes. Mayor Smith appointed a committee from the Council to investigate and report its findings at the next meeting of the City Council.

The library report was read and ordered filed, and the monthly bills were read and ordered paid.

HEAVY LOSS CAUSED BY AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

That automobile accidents are everybody's business is indicated by figures showing that such casualties cost the American public two and a half billion dollars in 1931, reports the California State Automobile Association. This huge sum includes potential earning capacity of those killed, hospital expenses, loss of time of the injured, damage to property other than automobiles, and damage to the cars themselves.

Estimating the number of cars in the United States at 25,000,000, this gives an average loss per car for the year of $100. Placing the population in round numbers at 125,000,000, this means that traffic crashes cost every resident an average of $20 a year.

Supplementing these figures the Automobile Association points out that California's loss from traffic accidents is now running to more than $100,000,000 annually.

AMERICAN LEGION POPPY SALE IS ON

Once every year the entire nation pauses to pay tribute to those men who have paid the supreme sacrifice in defense of this nation. Memorial Day will forever be held sacred by the American people. It is a day that stands apart from all others throughout the year. On Memorial day we roll back the curtain of time and from the pages of the past resurrect in spirit those men who have gone forth to fight for America and American ideals.

IN FLANDERS FIELD

In Flanders field the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That marks our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.
Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch, be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

(The author of this poem, Lieut.-Col. John McCrae, a member of the First Canadian contingent, died in France on January 28, 1928, after four years of service on the western front.)

Comrades, when you are asked to purchase a poppy tomorrow, Saturday, May 28, remember that every poppy sold by the American Legion Auxiliary in California is made by a disabled veteran in this state. Follows a list of the government hospitals and the number of poppies ordered from each for the 1932 sale: Letterman, 15,000; Palo Alto, 50,000; Mare Island, 50,000; San Diego, 45,000; San Fernando, 15,000; Sawtelle, 65,000; Yountville, 32,000; California Hut Work Room, 25,000.

The Auxiliary is proud of this huge order. First, because the disabled veterans will benefit by the three cents for each poppy they make; and secondly, the money derived from the sale will give relief to the distressed.

Following are the deserving pupils who will receive the American Legion school awards: Dorothy Molinari and James Millar, of Jefferson school; Barbara Vernengo and Donald Burow, of Crocker school; Viva Keithley and Jack Wilson, of Woodrow Wilson school. Commander Jack Mockler will present the medals during the graduation exercises to be held at the Jefferson Union high school on the evening of June 3.

The next meeting of Daly City Post No. 410 will be held tonight, Friday, May 27, at Eagles Hall. Following this meeting, which will be brief, the entertainment committee has planned to hold their monthly social and dance. Music will be furnished by "Doc" and his hay-wire orchestra. Bring your friends and enjoy the evening.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL WILL HOLD GRADUATION

Next Wednesday evening will be graduation for the Seniors at Jefferson High. There are seventy-one members of the class. The exercises will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

This year admission is to be by invitation only. This has been made necessary owing to the fact that the auditorium is not large enough to accommodate the general public. Last year it was found that several parents of the graduates, and many patrons of the school, were not able to gain admission. High school students were admitted on their student body cards. But even high school students will not be admitted this year unless by personal inviation of some member of the graduating class. Otherwise, the members of the student body along with the graduates and their parents would fill the auditorium to the exclusion of all others.

Following will be the program of the graduation exercises:

Entrance of Graduates. March by J. U. H. S. band; Director, Mr. Harry Waters.

Invocation, Rev. R. C. Stahl.

Welcoming Address, Albert Boynton, President of Senior Class.

BOY SCOUTS PARTY DRAWS LARGE CROWD

A large crowd gathered at the Daly City Auditorium last Tuesday evening, May 24, attending the whist party sponsored by the Daly City District Council, Boy Scouts of America, and making it possible to record another successful event in the annals of Daly City Scouting.

The whist was well handled by Mr. Thomas F. Allen, who has had considerable experience in conducting whist parties, and the members of the committee wish to extend their thanks to him for the assistance he so kindly gave. Remarkable skill was displayed by many of the players, and those securing a high score wore a smile of contentment, while those who were not so fortunate appeared quite satisfied that they had spent an enjoyable evening over the card tables, and also had contributed to a worthy cause.

Favorable mention is due the Scoutmasters and Cubmasters, who handled the sale of tickets, with the assistance of the Scouts and Cubs. The boys worked very hard and it was due to their co-operation thatsuch a satisfying result was obtained.

The District Committee, on behalf of the local Scout Troops and Cub Packs, wishes to thank each individual who helped in this undertaking, and to express appreciation to the many local merchants who aided in making the party a success.

The evening of June 10 has been designated as Parent's night by the local Boy Scouts. All parents and friends of Boy Scouts are cordially invited to attend this affair, which will be held in the Daly City Auditorium. The boys have arranged a fine program, featuring the Court of Honor from San Francisco Area Council, which will be present for the purpose of awarding merit badges to Scouts who have passed various Scout tests. The pesentation of earned awards is one of the big moments in a Scout's life, and every person interested in the Scout movement will do a great deal towards encouraging the boys to accomplish greater deeds by favoring them with your attendance. There will be no admission charge.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Jefferson is increasing its courses for vocational students. New courses that will be offered are public speaking, crafts and woodwork.

Mr. Saiz will take charge of the class in public speaking. This course should be popular with students who have oratorical aspirations and will be a very helpful course for those whose line of work brings them in direct contact with the people.

A course in crafts work will be placed under the direction of Miss Potter. This class will major in leather working, making pocketbooks, key holders, bill folds, lamp shades, etc.

Whether wood working will become a regular subject or not depends upon the number of students enrolling.

The school library has undergone a number of improvements and changes during the last school year.

Library practice, a new course offered last year, consisted of a class of students who aided Miss Gibbons, school librarian, in cleaning, repairing and distributing books, typing reports and doing many other things for the betterment of the library.

Student interest in fiction has been enlivened by the many colorful posters which have been posted in conspicuous places in the library.

Approximately sixty of the best books in the literature world have been bought during the last semester and been offered for student use.

Juniors and seniors are looking forward to the junior-senior banquet which is held annually at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in San Mateo.

It is for upper classmen only, although the junior and senior advisors will be present.

A ball will be held also for the juniors and seniors on June 3 at the Jefferson Union High School auditorium.

Caps were recently purchased by the students for the school band. The caps are in the school's colors, purple and gold, and are intended to be used at school functions.

For the first time in the golf history of Jefferson, the local team has won the P. A. L. championship.

Two years ago, when Jefferson golfers made their first appearance in the event, they came second, losing by three strokes. Last year San Jose again nosed out Jefferson by one stroke; but last week Jefferson took first place and the championship of the peninsula, San Jose coming second with five strokes behind.

Starting off the first tee in the rain was not much encouragement for the home team; but they stuck it out and came through with a smashing victory.

Jim Kennedy, captain and school champion, led the home team with a low score of 83, which was fairly good considering the weather conditions. Team mates who assisted him in the victory were Roland Petrocchi, Pete Pastorino and Robert Baird.

The students held an assembly last Wednesday for the purpose of allowing candidates for student body offices to deliver their campaign speeches. The school contains two parties, the Progressive and the Associalistic, with the latter favored to win the election. They have as candidates for student body offices, the following: student body president, James Kennedy; vice-president, James Martin; secretary, Marion Mansfelt; treasurer, Gladys Oakley; sergeant-at-arms, Fred Wilkinson; student judge, Roland Petrocchi; yell leader, Tom Bergin.

For the Progressive ticket: Marvin Lovstad, for student body president; Frank Torres, vice-president; Evelyn Clark, secretary; Rose Atkins; treasurer, Richard Opperman, sergeant-at-arms; Charles Munday, student judge; George Darragh, yell leader.

A movement for the wider use of bath tubs in France recalls a former custom at the aristocratic girls' school at St. Cyr, founded by Madame de Maintenon 250 years ago. Then the girls had to take "three great baths" a year, one in May, June and July—whether they needed them or not.

At the 50th anniversary celebration of his purchase of the Chattanooga Times, Adolph S. Ochs, owner of that paper and the New York Times, was asked what great ambition possessed him when he entered the newspaper business a half century ago. He answered: "To be able to pay my board."

Scientists now assert that the old stories about jointed snakes are all fakes and that "there ain't no such animal." The nearest approach to it, they say, is a harmless, legless lizard, that can drop its tail when in danger of being caught by that member. Anyway, we may still believe in mermaids and sea serpents.

"A pessimist is a man who has to live with an optimist." A newspaper recently credited this crisp epigram to Will Rogers. Arthur Brisbane says he doesn't doubt that Rogers said it, but avers that Ambrose Bierce also said it fifty years ago. Wonder where Bierce got the idea?

WHEN WASHINGTON REFUSED A KINGSHIP

Few Americans know that today our country might be a monarchy but for an act of nobility performed by George Washington on May 22, 1782. The officers of the Revolutionary Army had implored Washington to assume royal power, place himself at their head, and rule the country as a king. On May 22, a century and a half ago, General Washington refused this invitation in patriotic terms so strong that the idea was dropped. This information comes from the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

We know that he refused the offer of kingship, but the circumstances surrounding that dramatic moment in our history, known chiefly to scholars, need to be recalled to the everyday American, that he may form a still clearer conception of the nobility of Washington's character.

This incident, which constitutes one of the critical moments in the destiny of America, occurred while General Washington and the Continental Army were encamped at Newburgh, on the Hudson. The surrender of Cornwallis had virtually ended the Revolution, but hostilities were still in effect, and Washington was determined to hold the army together against any surprise renewal of the war. As usual his soldiers were poorly clothed and fed, and Congress was deeply in arrears in their pay. By then the war had dragged on for seven long years. The struggle had cost many of Washington's officers the loss of their personal fortunes, and the entire enlisted force faced a future of want on being released to civil life.

Discontent rose to dangerous intensity in all ranks. At length, Colonel Lewis Nicola, a respected character on friendly terms with the Commander-in-Chief, spoke for the officers as a body when he addressed to Washington a veiled proposal that he take over the government of the country, with the army behind him, and rule it as a king.

The late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, in his biography of Washington, states that on this occasion Washington was as truly tempted as Caesar, with an offer to make himself king or emperor. The stroke, moreover, would have been easy of accomplishment. The colonies were all beggared by the war. Their governments were slack and weak. The Revolutionary army was the one cohesive, national power in the land. To a man the soldiers worshipped Washington, and with their aid he could have taken over control of the nation. As near as that, at this stage of America's history, was the country to becoming a monarchy.

And yet it was a great distance away. To George Washington the temptation of kingship was no temptation at all. On the contrary he put aside with far greater and more sincere indignation than did Caesar wave aside the laurel crown. In a letter whose every word should be implanted in the mind of every school child in America, he declined Nicola's offer and rebuked the man who made it. Writing on May 22, 1782, he said:

"Sir,—With a mixture of great surprise and astonishment, I have read with attention the sentiments you have submitted to my perusal. Be assured, Sir, no occurrence in the course of the war has given me more painful sensations, than your information of there being such ideas existing in the army, as you have expressed, and I must view with abhorrence and reprehend with severity. . . .

"I am at a loss to conceive what part of my conduct could have given encouragement to an address, which to me seems big with the greatest mischiefs that can befall my Country. If I am not deceived in my knowledge of myself, you could not have found a person to whom your schemes are more disagreeable. . . . Let me conjure you, then, if you have any regard for your Country, concern for yourself or posterity, or respect for me, to banish these thoughts from your mind, and never communicate, as from yourself of any one else, a sentiment of the like nature."

LEGION AUXILIARY READY FOR ANNUAL POPPY SALE

Members of thes American Legion Auxiliary will be out in full force on the streets of every community in the state on Friday and Saturday, May 27 and 28, selling paper replicas of the red Flanders memorial poppy to raise funds for the welfare of the living victims of the World War. Every worker will be a volunteer, donating her sirvices to help make Poppy Day a success, so that these unfortunates can be given sustenance during the coming year.

In California 300,000 poppies will be placed on sale. These poppies have been fashioned by the hands of disabled veterans in the Government hospitals at Presidio, San Francisco; San Fernando, Sawtelle, Yountville Palo Alto, Mare Island, San Diego, and the California Hut Work Room, Los Angeles. For every poppy made by these sufferers of the battlefields three cents are paid by the Auxiliary. This money provides the disabled with comforts and necessities which the government does not provide and enables them to send a few dollars to their destitute families.

RED CROSS AIDS FAMILIES IN NEED

American Red Cross chapters in the Pacific area distributing Red Cross flour, milled from government wheat, to help sustain families in need, had placed 137,295 barrels of flour as of May 14, according to a compliation announced by A. L. Scafer, area manager.

In the eight states and territories comprising the Pacific branch area, 267 chapters have participated in the activity. Of this number 73 distributed direct all the flour received, 79 handled partial distribution, while 513 other relief agencies co-operated in the distribution under Red Cross supervision.

Quantities by states show the following spread: Alaska, 756 barrels; Arizona, 5,754; California, 54,443; Idaho, 8,759; Nevada, 2,327; Oregon, 8,801; Utah, 27,787; and Washington, 22,008 barrels.

Approved applications of chapters receiving 5,000 or more barrels of flour include: Los Angeles, 26,820 barrls; Salt Lake, 7,000 barrels; and Oakland and Seattle, 5,000 each.

Figures show that 272,781 families in the Pacific area have been aided by the flour distribution. Estimating five persons to a family, the flour spread helped 1,363,905 persons.

Included in flour handled by the western states are 6,633 barrels that went to Indians on the reservations in Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

Livestock feed also has been distributed in drought affected areas of the West, Alaska and Arizona not being certified by the United States Department of Agriculture as having been affected by drought. Ninety chapters distributed 54,373 tons of livestock feed, 58,918 families sharing in the distribution. In this activity they had the hearty co-operation of Agricultural Extension Departments and County Agents.

The latest compilation of national flour distribution by the Red Cross under date of May 7, shows 1,551,873 barrels of flour requisitioned by 3,271 chapters. Of this amount 722,749 barrels had been shipped.

The amount of livestock feed requisitioned was 210,816 tons, while shipments then totalled 140,991 tons. Milling orders have been placed with 558 millers throughout the United States.

Professor: "Good boy."

Plebe: "And here' the ten answers."

Four asserted ringleaders of the Communist party in Amador county were tarred and feathered one night recently and escorted to the county line. They were told not to return. The Sheriff said a "group of Amador county citizens" seized the men.

Formation of a high-school press association for the San Joaquin Valley, an organization long sought by students of journalism and their faculty advisers, is being pushed toward completion, according to Rod McVeigh, editor of the Blue and White publication at the Kern County Union High School at Bakersfield.

Deer herds, wandering down from Mount Tamalpais, are a menace, eating shrubs and plants in residents' gardens, the Fairfax City Council was informed by a number of protestants. Councilman Robert Mullins stated he would confer with state game officials. Under state law, the property owners cannot kill or harm the deer.

J. Styles, Paradise miner, has been showing a gold nugget, weighing more than an ounce, which he found in a crevice between two rocks at a point near there on the Feather River where he is placer mining. The nugget was only slightly exposed between the rocks and had apparently been overlooked in the early days.

Through representations of the Imperial Grain Growers' co-operative, the Southern Pacific Railway has cut rates on grain from Imperial Valley. Hay growers of the valley are considering the organization of a similar co-operative and a number of meetings for this purpose have been held at various points. So far, attendance has been large.

The Sierra Railway Company of California, whose principal office is at Jamestown, four miles west of Sonora, passed recently, through court action, into the hands of a receiver. Charles H. Segerstrom, president of the First National Bank of Sonora, was named receiver. The action resulted from a move by the Anglo-California Trust Company for foreclosure of two mortgages.

Expressing the belief that the surface of California only has been scratched so far as gold mining is concerned Walter W. Bradley, State mineralogist predicted that other great quartz mines will be developed probably extending as deep as two miles into the earth. Bradley referred to the diamonds found in the Oroville vicinity and said that the original volcanic neck from which the diamonds came never has been found. He indicated that with proper geological survey work the chimney might be located.

Cadets of the Porterville high school are national victors in the United States inter-collegiate R.O.T.C. rifle match, according to word received by Maj. O. L. Edwards, local commandant, from Maj.-Gen. Malin Craig, commander of the Ninth Corps Area, in which the school is located. Score of the Porterville team was 7607, over 50 points higher than its nearest competitor. This is declared the first time such an honor has come to a California school.

Favoring the continuance of the State's fire patrol service for Kern county, the Kern county branch of the State Cattlemen's Association has sent a resolution to this effect to the Board of Supervisors. Due to the fact that some opposition is reported to have developed, the contract with the State Forestry department for fire patrol has not been signed for this county as in other years. The service costs the county about $10,000 a year, with the State paying a large part of the expenses.

April frosts, along with other less apparent causes, removed the "plague of overproduction" in California fruit crops for 1932, it was announced in the first survey of the season made by the California Cooperative Crop Reporting Service of the State and Federal departments of agriculture. Almonds, cherries and prunes are the crops that suffered heaviest from the late frosts, although the wine and table grapes also were hit to the extent that a "bumper production is not indicated."

Factory employment in California expanded far more than the expected seasonal improvement during April, according to an announcement by the California State Chamber of Commerce research department. Factory employment for April, a survey showed, increased 8 per cent over March, while payrolls advanced 4 per cent.

Cotton plantings in the McFarland district are in good shape. Many cotton growers have put at least a fourth of their land into alfalfa this year to build up fertility.

Rigid enforcement of new state laws relating to the financial responsibility of motorists is in effect. Operator licenses of 455 motorists have been suspended since January 1 for failure to comply with this provision, John A. McGilvray, chief of the legal division of the motor vehicle department, announced. These cases involved motorists who were not covered with liability and property damage insurance and failed to meet civil judgments rendered against them as a result of traffic accidents. Licenses of drivers in such cases will be speedily revoked, McGilvray warned.

War veterans are now dying at the rate of five an hour, 120 per day or 43,800 a year, according to statistics received from the Veterans' Administration in Washington by Dr. B. W. Black of Oakland, State chairman of the American Legion's Rehabilitation Commission. Approximately 44,215 veterans are now receiving hospital treatment at the expense of the government. Of these, 27,402 are in hospitals of the Veterans' Administration, and 6013 in Veterans' Administration homes hospitals, leaving 2400 in contract civil and State institutions. These patients are classified as follows: 19,422 nervous and mental; 7,644 tuberculosis, and 16,996 general medical and surgical cases.

Los Angeles county is shown in a report issued by the State Department of Agriculture to have shown an increase of 97,031 pounds in the amount of butter manufactured in 1931, as compared with the butter manufactured in 1930. The figures are 1,342,745 pounds in 1931 and 1,245,694 pounds in 1930. The State as a whole showed a healthy appetite for cheese and milk produced within the State but there were fewer orders for State-produced butter and ice cream. California consumed less of its own butter and imported more from other States. The State used more of its own cheese as cheese importations decreased.

The board of regents of the University of California have unanimously accepted the gift tendered by Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Kellogg of Battle Creek, Mich., of their 800-acre Arabian Horse Ranch at Pomona. With the ranch are given ninety-five head of pure-blood Arabian horses, representing one-fourth of the Arabian horses in the world outside of Arabia. With the gift is a $600,000 endowment with which to carry on the work started by Mr. Kellogg in the propagation and preservation of the Arabian horse strain. The ranch will be designated as the W. K. Kellogg Institute of Animal Husbandry, University of California, and the gift provides that scientific research and breeding studies may be made of all types of animals. It provides also that the exhibitions of Arabian horses now conducted shall be continued.

A recent count reveals that only seven of the once numerous pronghorn antelope which in years gone by roamed in great herds over the mountain sides and valleys of Los Angeles county remain in the wilds, declares Spence D. Turner, chief county game warden. The survey made by the warden's men in March found the seven in the area that bears their name—Antelope Valley. In the present herd are one large buck, five does and an individual smaller than the rest that looks like a yearling doe, according to rangers. "The herd," Turner declared, comprises the last of one that numbered, according to old residents of the region, as high as 500 or 600 animals forty years ago in the same area. The large Tejon ranch, on which the antelope range, for the most part on low hills and flat grass lands, now supplies them with a moderate amount of protection. "Their great weakness," Turner says, "is their curiosity. They can be attracted by waving a flag or by the old Indian method of lying on one's back and waving the legs in the air. By such methods they are brought within gunshot."

Louis A. Burtch, Kern county agricultural commissioner, is marshalling his forces for a concerted war, augmenting State forces to fight the camel's thorn weed pest. This weed scourge of the Orient, which has laid waste great areas in Russia, is now in Kern county as well as seven other counties in California. By comparison with the puncture vine, the camel's thorn is vicious as a leopard compared to a tit-mouse. Puncture vine is bad, the commissioner admits, but camel's thorn is 100 times worse. Once in a field it cost $1000 an acre to eradicate camel's thorn until the more recent and scientific carbon bisulphide method was developed. Camel's thorn was introduced into this State eight or nine years ago, it is believed, by camel carriers and date shoots in Indio. It spread rapidly and has already cost Riverside county $25,000 in eradication measures. Now the weed is in eight other counties, with Kern, Kings, Fresno and Merced affected in the valley area. The camel's thorn, according to Mr. Burtch, has a very extensive root system, much more so than Johnson grass. Plowing simply improves the plant, so deeply do the roots penetrate with a vast system of underground ramifications.

Proposed legislation by which a super-power transmission line would be constructed by the State from the new Kennett Dam, to provide cheap power to farmers in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, was unanimously endorsed in a resolution adopted by the California Irrigation Districts' Association at the close of its semi-annual meeting at Fresno. A. Stratton, a director of the Merced Irrigation District, said it would be constructed by the State through the two valleys and would be built in connection with the State-wide water plan.

Net Catch Is the Town's Net Profit

SO PLENTIFUL are the herring that make their way up and down the shallow waters of the famous brook at Pembroke, Mass., that the town has hit upon the novel idea of furnishing motorists with nets and then charging them 25 cents a dozen for their catch. It is estimated that over 120,000 herring make their way up this brook every day.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PATIENCE, be you young or old,
Brings its own reward, we're told.

Buster Bear doesn't believe it. He doesn't see it that way at all. He is willing to admit that it does sometimes, but not always. No, indeed, not always! Perhaps that is because the reward isn't always what Buster wants it to be. You know how it is when we set our hearts on a thing and then don't get it. The disappointment makes us overlook some of the good things we do get. I suspect that it was this way with Buster that day when he discovered Busy Bee in the Green Forest.

Buster had heard the hum of Busy Bee and then had discovered her at work among some flowers in a little opening among the trees right back of where he was sitting. Then she flew away. Now the sight and the sound of Busy Bee had awakened pleasant thoughts in Buster Bear—thoughts of honey. Can you imagine any sweeter thoughts? Buster knows a great deal about Busy Bee. Ever since he was a little cub he has been interested in Busy Bee. I am afraid it has been a selfish interest, but none the less it has been a real interest. It has led him to find out a very great deal about Busy Bee. He knows that Busy Bee makes honey. He knows that she gathers the sweets from the flowers of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest and that in a secret storehouse she packs these sweets away in the form of honey. He knows that sometimes this secret storehouse is in a hollow tree, sometimes in a hollow log, and sometimes even in a cave among the rocks. He knows that Busy Bee never wastes any time, not a single minute, but from morning till night is at work gathering the sweets of the flowers and making them into honey. He knows, too, that she isn't a safe person to interfere with, that she carries the sharpest of little lances with her all the time, and little as she is isn't the least bit afraid to use it on even such a big fellow as he is. Yes, indeed, Buster Bear knows a great deal about Busy Bee.

So Buster Sat and Dreamed and Watched the Flowers and Waited for Busy Bee to Return.

When she flew away from those flowers in the little opening among the trees in the Green Forest, she went so suddenly that Buster didn't see in which direction she flew. "Never mind," said Buster himself, "she'll come back; and next time I'll be sharper and see which way she goes. This is a very pleasant and comfortable place, so I'll just wait until she returns."

So Buster sat down where he could watch those flowers, made himself comfortable and waited for Busy Bee to come back. And while he waited he dreamed—day dreams, you know—and they were very pleasant dreams. They were sweet dreams, the very sweetest of dreams, for they were all of honey. He dreamed of a great hollow tree and that he had climbed it and with his great strong claws had torn it open and found more honey than he could eat all at once, and Buster can eat a great deal. He smacked his lips quite as if that honey were real, and not just dream honey.

So Buster sat and dreamed and watched the flowers and waited for Busy Bee to return. He waited and waited. He was very patient, was Buster Bear. With such pleasant dreams it wasn't hard to be patient. You see, he felt that patience might make those dreams come true. When Busy Bee should come back for more sweets he would follow her straight to her secret storehouse. So he waited and waited.

The Jolly Little Sunbeams were very comforting and pleasant. It was very, very still and beautiful there. His stomach was reasonably full. Altogether Buster Bear was very comfortable. He blinked at the flowers. He nodded. Presently he lay down, and then—well, then those sweet day dreams became still sweeter sleep dreams. Yes, sir, Buster Bear fell asleep. And while he slept, Busy Bee returned and went away again, not once but several times. The Black Shadows had begun to creep throughout the Green Forest, when at last Buster opened his eyes. He scrambled to his feet and shook himself. Then he growled a rumbly-grumbly growl of disappointment. He knew that Busy Bee would not return again that day, but had gone to bed for the night. His patience had brought no reward, he thought. You see he quite overlooked the nice long rest and the beautiful sweet dreams. He had wanted a different reward, and so he thought he hadn't had any.

Right for Golf

Looked at from the sports angle, a comfortable tweed costume is just as important for golf as a well-grooved swing. This costume is roomily cut, the skirt has fullness to spare, the short pull-on sweater has ease through the shoulders and the fitted one-button jacket can be left on or off according to the weather. — Woman's Home Companion.

JUST BALANCING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A BIRD upon a twig,
Just balancing,
A bird not very big
Or anything;
Although the branches sway
In every breeze,
He sings, the best he may,
His harmonies.

And what are we? Like him
We dip and dance,
Upon a swaying limb
The sport of chance.
The sky not always blue,
The winds at rest,
We sometimes live it through
And do our best.

Our hold on joy is poor,
And winds are strong,
And little is secure
For very long,
And yet to heaven's Word
Still let us cling,
As bravely as a bird
Just balancing.

BACK YARD GARDEN

A LITTLE garden at the back of the city lot, a bit of space where green things may grow in neat rows, a half dozen tomato plants, bush beans, carrots, radishes and onions—what a joy it can add to one's life. Even where space is not such a factor a small garden near the kitchen where it may be tended is to be recommended.

A garden south or west of the house gets more protection from cold winds, and better sunlight. Any kind of soil with proper handling will make good gardens. Place the rows so that they get as much spacing as possible, making the garden look trim by the proper spacing and placing of seeds. Plan the crops so that the soil is working all summer. The time to plant depends upon the date of the last frosts, which is not always reliable, but many of our vegetables like lettuce, radishes, turnips, spinch and pursley are not afraid of a little cool weather.

Where one has space for corn, it must be planted after all frost danger is past. Corn is one of the most satisfactory of vegetables to raise. In good soil, with plenty of moisture and heat, with a few hoeings, a crop will respond that will delight the heart. There is nothing equal to the fresh juicy golden bantam or the country gentleman, and later the luscious milky ears of the evergreen.

When the last frost is over plant early beets, onion seed, carrots and such tender vegetables as the bush bean. Now the tomato plants may be set out, the cabbage and eggplant as well as pepper plant and cucumber seed may be sown, also melon and squash. Do not have these near enough to mix the pollen, or the melons will not be of good flavor.

CANADA'S DISCOVERER

Canada has honored her discoverer, Jacques Cartier, the famous French navigator, by the erection at Quebec of a magnificent statue, a replica of that raised to his memory in his native seaport, St. Malo, France, where he was born in 1494.

Commanding two ships under a commission from Francis I of France, in 1534, he crossed the Atlantic, touching Cape Buenavista, Newfoundland, sailing northward along the coast and then southward through the Straits of Belle Isle, discovering the mainland of Canada and taking possession in the name of his king, thinking it a part of Asia.

The following year he explored the St. Lawrence as far as the Indian village of Hochelaga, the present site of the city of Montreal. After many hardships, with his crew weakened by scurvy, a disease then unknown in Europe, he returned to France in 1536.

In 1541 Cartier returned to Canada with five ships and established a settlement, which he named Charlesbourg-Royal, near the present site of Quebec. The rigorous climate and attacks of hostile Indians so discouraged the settlers that Cartier abandoned the place and took them back to France in 1542. He lived quietly at St. Malo until his death in 1557.

While Cartier did not found a permanent colony, his explorations blazed the way for the building of a great empire—but under another flag.

WORK FOR 30,000 MEN

A 17,000-ton challenge to the depression will be launched on June 11, announces D. Stewart Iglehart, president of the Grace Line. For on that day the Santa Paula, 4,500,000 sister ship of the recently launched Santa Rosa, will glide down the ways of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company at Kearney, N. J.

Mrs. Edward T. Ford, of San Francisco, wife of the president of the Panama Mail Service of the Grace Line, will christen the new ship, which is the second of four in the $20,000,000 building program which has kept 30,000 men at work since February, 1931. There is not a state in the union which has not contributed labor and materials to these new vessels, according to the shipbuilding company.

The four new ships will make their maiden voyages next fall and winter on the only New York - California service which includes seven Central and South American ports. The vessels have been designed for comfort while cruising in tropical waters, novel features including dining salons on upper decks, with roofs that may be rolled back when desired.

Besides giving many men much needed employment in building, this new fleet will facilitate and doubtless greatly increase tourist travel and commerce between the United States and countries to the southward.

SOME BIBLE FACTS

Dr. Thomas Horne, an English Bible scholar and critic who died in 1862, devoted several years to compiling interesting facts about the Bible, among them being the following.

The Bible is composed of 66 books, containing 1,189 chapters, 41,173 verses, 774,746 words and 3,566,480 letters. The shortest verse is John 11:35 and contains only the two words, "Jesus wept." The longest verse is Esther 8:9.

The word "Lord" occurs 1,853 times; "Jehovah" 5,845 times; the word "girl" only twice; "everlasting fire" is found twice; while the words "everlasting punishment, "eternity" and "reverend" occur only once each.

Several verses are duplicated, thus four verses of the 107th Psalm are identical, and the 36th chapter of Isaiah and the 19th chapter of II Kings are exactly alike.

No original manuscript of any portion of the Bible is in existence. The oldest manuscript known, a fragment of the 11th chapter of the Psalms, thought to have been written in the third century, is preserved in the British Museum. The Bible as we know it has come down to us through many translations, the first complete English translation having been made by John Wycliffe, who died in 1384, and his fellow workers, Nicholas and Purvey.

William Tyndale was the first to print the Bible in English, beginning in 1525. He printed all of the New Testament and a small portion of the Old, but his translation came under the displeasure of the ecclesiastical authorities. After 15 months' imprisonment he was tried and burned at the stake for heresy on October 6, 1536.

EARLY PHOTOGRAPHY

While experiments which led to the ultimate development of photography were made as far back as about 1778 by Scheele, a Swedish chemist, followed by the labors of Wedgewood in England, Siebeck in Germany, and many others, it remained for two Frenchmen, Niepce and Daguerre, to give to the world the first practical photographic process.

Niepce discovered a method of making photographs that would not fade in 1825, but it was not until 1839, six years after Niepce's death, that his co-worker Daguerre developed the daguerreotype, which marked the beginning of commercial photography.

In their earliest experiments, it required exposures of three to eight hours in bright sunlight to secure a photographic copy, but the first daguerreotypes were made by exposures of about half an hour. In the beginning only landscapes, monuments and the like could be used as subjects, as no living thing could be kept quiet sufficiently long.

The first photographic personal portrait was made by Prof. John W. Draper, an American chemist, in 1890, after which improvements in processes followed in fairly rapid succession. Before 1840 the only means of preserving tthe likeness of persons was by the making of death masks or through sculpture, paintings and drawings.

Now the goal of photographic science and art is to produce pictures in colors direct from the subject, toward which some preliminary steps have been taken.

In view of the wonderful advances being made in every branch of science, it can hardly be doubted that direct color photography will one day be an accomplished fact.

WHY MORE FARM LAND?

It should be evident to any student of the agricultural situation that there is too much land under cultivation in this country already. The Secretary of Agriculture himself says that "we need to reduce our present cultivated acreage by 30 or 40 million acres."

In spite of this situation, which has existed for several years, we see the government spending hundreds of millions on Boulder Dam, which is intended to bring under cultivation a vast area of new farm land through irrigation. Numerous other irrigation projects have been built by the government for the same purpose, and more are in prospect.

There is now before Congress a proposal to spend some 400 million dollars on the Columbia Basin irrigation scheme, whereby about a million and a quarter acres more would be made available for farm purposes.

While these things aare going on, the Farm Board is spending half a billion dollars in a futile effort to handle the surplus farm crops already on hand. And all the taxpayers, including the farmers, must dig in their pockets to pay the bill.

Commenting on the situation, Farm and Ranch, a leading agricultural publication, says: "That this Columbia Basin project should be turned down flatly by Congress, if the interests of the country and especially of the farmers are to be served, will be recognized by all unbiased men. The federal government should leave all economic activities to private enterprise."

STAMPS 85 YEARS OLD

It is perhaps not generally known that United States postage stamps have been in use only 85 years, but such is the case. The first issue of United States stamps consisted of only two denominations, the 5-cent used on half-ounce letters going 300 miles or less, and the 10-cent for letters going a distance exceeding 300 miles.

The 5-cent stamps bore the portrait of Benjamin Franklin, our first postmaster; the 10-cent stamp bore the portrait of Washington, and were first issued in 1837, although a few postmasters had issued some stamps at their own expense for about two years previously. The very first adhesive postage stamps to be issued by any government were introduced in England in 1840, the example being quickly followed by other nations.

The first issue of postage stamps in 1837 would seem very insignificant in volume compared with the tremendous output of the present year, which is estimated to be not less than 18 billion, requiring 1,000 tons of paper, 575 tons of gum and 500 tons of ink. Placed end to end this one year's supply would reach around the earth at the equator ten times.

But no one has figuered out how much energy and moisture it will take to stick them where they will perform their duty.

WIFE SOLD AT PROFIT

Few of the present generation, particularly in the North, know that before the Civil War a great many negroes in the South owned other negroes as slaves. Some interesting facts concerning the subject are given in Prof. Carter Goodwin Woodson's book, "Free Negro Heads of Families."

He shows that as far back as 1830 one-seventh of the negroes in the country were free, some of them rich, owning large plantations and other valuable property. In 1857 one negro in South Carolina owned 200 slaves, in Louisiana four negroes owned respectively 91, 89, 50 and 47 slaves. Many others owned smaller numbers, it being estimated that 40,000 free negroes owned nearly 100,000 slaves at one time.

The story is told of a Charleston negro who admired a female slave owned by a neighbor and bought her for a wife. Later on when she had failed to behave herself as he thought proper, he sold her at a profit of $50.

MEMORIAL DAY

(By Van Hogan, State Commander, American Legion)

The pulse of a mighty nation throbs with increased devotion today in memory of its fallen brave. Once again the people of America, high and low alike, keep annual tryst with their beloved soldier dead. Homage and tribute we offer at the tombs of those illustrious souls who exemplified the rarest of manly courage on the field of battle, who fought with valor and who sacrificed their life-blood that this Republic might live and prosper.

Within every heart there swells the higest emotion of gratitude for the service they gave. Flowers of sweet remembrance, placed by loving hands on grass-grown graves, express in symbolic terms the sincere appreciation and tender affections this nation bore for its gallant defenders. Their memory is sacred. The service they gave is immortal.

We kneel at the tombs of the war dead and rechristen our faith in America and reassert our individual love and devotion to the Flag for which they fought and to the country for which they died. From their falling hands the American Legion accepted the torch of service and today it is the responsibility of every American citizen to carry on and serve as best he may for the honor and glory of a great and mighty Republic.

VAST SUM IS EXPECTED FOR CALIFORNIA PROJECTS

California projects totaling $500,000,000 may be included in the public works program which is now being urged before Congress for the relief of the unemployed, declares Representative Phil D. Swing. This will include public buildings, highways, river and harbor developments, flood control work, fire prevention projects in the national forests already authorized by Congress, and also, through federal loans to the state and its subdivisions, would provide for such undertakings as the Golden Gate bridge, the Metropolitan aqueduct and various local water conservation projects, bridges and tunnels, according to Mr. Swing.

GASOLINE TAX $3,477,087.17

California's April gasoline tax toals 3,477,087.17, marking an increase of 1.13 per cent over the figure for the preceding month, according to announcement made by R. E. Collins of Redding, Chairman of the State Board of Equalization.

Analysis of the assessment roll of gasoline distributors as prepared by the State Board of Equalization shows that during April 117,073,641.1 gallons of gasoline were produced for distribution, subject to the three cent per gallon tax.

INDUSTRY

Thrives only on dollars that work

Unemployment in California will vanish only when every inactive dollar in the state gets back to work . . . Changing our mental attitude from one of fear and anxiety to courage and common sense—getting our dollars back into normal action through sensible buying or investing, and banking our surplus—is the only way back to sound prosperity . . . The entire Bank of America organization of 8,000 strong—reinforced by more than 200,000 California stockholders—is engaged in a vigorous statewide "Back-to-good-times" movement. Constructive newspaper, radio, outdoor and street car advertising, combined with intensive personal effort, are the forces energetically working for a statewide return to normal conditions . . . Join this public spirited movement. Put your inactive money to work through banks and legitimate trade channels. Only circulating dollars will create jobs—nothing else can!

A PRETTY WEDDING CEREMONY

On Saturday evening, May 14, the home of Mrs. Ellen Linden, of 335 Poplar avenue, Milbrae Highlands, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when her daughter, Miss Grace Newbrough, was united in marriage to Mr. Louis Fitzgerald, by Brother Hinton of the Latter-day Saints church of San Francisco. The Linden residence was beautifully decorated for the occasion with varied colored flowers, artistically intermingled with ferns, presentinga picture never to be forgotten.

The bride, gowned in a beautiful creation of white satin, wore a trailing veil crowned with orange blossoms. The veil was worn twenty-six years ago by her mother. The bride was a striking figure as she marched in on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Claude Hunter, who gave her away in marriage. The strains of the wedding march were played by Mr. James Stevenson, and Mrs. Beatrice Batz rendered two solos, "O Promise Me," and "I Love You Truly." The bridesmaid, her twin sister, Miss Gertrude, wore a gown of green silk lace, and both carried gorgeous bouquets of American Beauty roses and streamers of pansies. Mr. Ford, of Burlingame, acted as best man.

After the wedding ceremony a reception was held in the social hall, where about sixty relatives and close friends enjoyed a sumptuous repast. A huge wedding cake was cut by the newlyweds, while toasts and short speeches were made. Mr. Fitzgerald, Sr., was master of ceremonies. Mrs. Fitzgerald wore a charming dress of black lace. Mrs. Ellen Linden, who wore a beautiful gown of pale pink lace and a corsage of pansies, is the well known and popular bookkeeper of the Lake Merced Golf and Country Club.

Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed to the strains of an excellent orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald were the recipients of numerous edding gifts during the festivities. The happy couple left on a motor trip south, and on their return they will make their home in Millbrae Highlands.

WE MAKE OWN HARD TIMES

In his remarkably valuable book, "Men, Money and Mergers," published by the MacMillan Company, Dr. George L. Hoxie examines the depression, the various solutions offered for it, and shows conclusively that most of the paternalistic and socialistic remedies proposed are hollow as drums.

The public brings hard times on itself. "Unless the average person pays as he goes," Dr. Hoxie writes, "unless business is conducted upon a virtual barter basis, with each paying for what he gets by giving what he has currently produced. a final crash is inevitable. . . . The end comes when customers on the outer fringe have used up their per capita savings have used up their saved capital and hav mortgaged their earnings to the limit. Almost in a day, a considerable fraction of their buying stops. . . . Hard times are on."

As for the way out of the depression, Dr. Hoxie shows that the "assistance" of politicians and radical planners can only hinder a normal recovery. He says: "Individualism may be looked to with confidence for concrete advice respecting the best paths to pursue to more rapid and more equitable distribution of newly created wealth."

Dr. Hoxie's book is refreshing, coming as it does on the heels of a multitude of other works which, for the most part, attempt to show the need for a radical change in our system of government, and in government's relation to industry, to workers and to investors, without offering any practical substitute plan. The depression will pass—and if we are wise, it will leave us with knowledge that will enable us to prevent wild ups-and-downs in the business cycle in the future. Those interested in economic sanity rather than political radicalism, will profit by Dr. Hoxie's book.

Jess Willard, world's heavyweight champion from 1915 to 1919, now works in a Los Angeles market owned by his sister-in-law. When called before a court recently he exhibited 27 cents and told the judge that it was "all the money he had in the world."

Congressional economy consists principally in cutting out items in the economy bill.

Investigation of a small boy's pockets generally discloses a surprising collection of junk. A doctor's questioning of a very sick youngster at Berkeley, Calif., developed a similar condition in his stomach, into which he admitted having introduced a regular cafe meal, peanut brittle, a hot dog, a hamburger sandwich, soda pop, two ice cream sundaes, peanuts, a whole mince pie, root beer, two all-day suckers, three cream puffs, a butter horn and assorted candies.

Two hours more went by. It was nine o'clock now. Fullhouse gave a command and departed. Ten minutes later, a shabby automobile stopped at a street corner. Joe Barry, his face ghastly gray in the light of the street lamp, moved from the curbing and climbed in beside the driver. Then onward, to a country road. Fullhouse slowed the vehicle and, freeing one hand from the jerky steering wheel, reached to a pocket.

"Here's your gat, keed," he said.

"A gun? What will we need a gun for?"

"Who said we'd need it for anything? Put it in your pocket."

"I don't know much about automatics." The flat feel of it had told him that it was not an ordinary revolver.

"Don't need to. Put it in your pocket!"

"I'd rather not have the thing."

"Yeh? You got to have something for a bluff, don't you? Stick it in your pocket. Just because you got a rod on you ain't no sign you've got to shoot it. Just insurance. Stick it in your poke and forget it."

Joe Barry stuffed the gun into his coat pocket. The car rattled on.

Fullhouse leaned far over the wheel, studying the road ahead. Suddenly he swerved into thick woods, which yielded suddenly to an open space, and a semicircular driveway. Then the car halted before the high-pillared veranda of a rambling frame house.

"Well," said Fullhouse. "A guy couldn't ask for a nicer lay than this. Eh, keed?"

There was no need for Joe to answer. Fullhouse had left the wheel and swung out of the car, to skirt the house in quick, familiar fashion. For a moment, Joe could hear the rustling of foliage as Fullhouse plunged through it, evidently on his way to silence the "telltales." Joe was alone with himself—with his realizations. This was some one's home. He was about to enter it, to steal that some one's possessions. Whether they would be missed or not, he realized now, made little difference. It was the crime which counted and not the extent of it. Ten cents or ten thousand dollars, he would be a thief, nevertheless. The word had a cheap, sneaking quality, destructive to self-respect.

Ten minutes passed, so many hours to Joe Barry. Then Fullhouse came briskly back.

"Reach in the tool box and get that pinch bar," he commanded, Joe was slow in complying, fumbling and clattering tools in the darkness. Fullhouse came beside him.

"Lemme see there," he commanded, pushing the other man aside. "I know where it is," drawing forth a bent piece of steel, sharpened at one end. "All right now, me'n you. This under the window and our shoulders to it—we'll be inside." But at the veranda, he halted and called over his shoulder. "Well, come on! What the h—l you stalling for?"

Joe followed him with lagging feet. There was a moment of activity and the window yielded. They were within. Carefully, Fullhouse pulled down the window, and walking to the wall, touched a snap light.

"This joint's right," Fullhouse explained. "City power and everything. Pipe the dump. Ain't it a knockout?"

Joe Barry looked about him with dazed eyes. He had never been in such surroundings as this. The rugs were deep and soft beneath his feet; this was the dining room, paneled and furnished with a richness which Joe Barry had seen only in pictures. Cut crystal gleamed. Silver service shone from the heavy, hunting-style buffet. Fullhouse looked about appraisingly.

"We'll grab some of that stuff—solid. Just what we can carry without it being too heavy. What we want is the jack out of that match box. Come on."

Again, with the familiarity he had shown ever since he had turned off the main road, Fullhouse moved from the dining room into a larger chamber. A cabinet stood against the wall; Fullhouse glanced in its direction, then with an afterthought, smeared a palm against his forehead.

"Hotter'n h—l in here," he said. "I'll open a window." He threw a lock and raised the heavy pane. The air from without was refreshing. Fullhouse breathed it deeply. "A house sure gets sizzling, shut up like this." He nodded then to a large painting on the wall. "It's behind that," he said.

"We'd better pull the curtains," answered Joe nervously. "Gee, Fullhouse, we can't work right out in the open this way."

"Why can't we?" He nodded. "There's the light switch right behind you. Switch it out and come here." Joe Barry obeyed, feeling his way across the room in the darkness. "See anything?"

"No, the woods come almost up to the house, don't they?"

"Yeh, and it's that way for fifty acres. Turn on the lights again. Then go get your keister."

Joe obeyed. From behind him as he went through the big hall to the front door, he could hear Fullhouse mumbling at the cabinet against the wall. He was still there when Joe returned, thumbling curiously at dials, at last to gain a response.

"That ain't so bad," he said, turning nonchalantly away. From the concealed loudspeaker, a jungle band squawked its jagged melody.

Fullhouse glanced professionally at the oil painting on the wall. "Guess we got to yank this thing down. Never mind trying to lift it off its hook—get that corner and give it a yank." The fastening broke. A small, round, metal appliance was revealed in the wall. Fullhouse stepped forward and gave a professional twist to the knob.

"Humph!" he said and walking away, merely stood, his hands behind his back and his hips shoved forward.

"The lousy bum, he's switched that combination." He pursed his lips and rolled his eyes to the sweating Joe.

"What's wrong with the safe?" Joe asked huskily.

"Jammed with a new combo. As if that made a difference. We'll soup it. Go on and grab that stuff out of the dining room, while I get the drill. I thought maybe this'd happen."

He forced Joe to his task. The radio blared on, to different melodies now. Joe halted in his work, half starting toward the instrument. Then Fullhouse came back, fitting a steel bit to a heavy brace.

"Lis.en," he said. "Grab that chair. Get on it—you're stronger than I am. We've got to drill that baby. Then soup it."

"Soup—that means nitroglycerin."

"You know all the words, don't you?" asked Fullhouse. "Well, what of it? What's the diff whether we open it with our fingers or with an ax? Get up on that chair."

Crawling things had suddenly crept into Joe Barry's heart. He stepped to the chair, took the drill, and started turning, the shavings cutting grudgingly.

"It'll take fifteen or twenty minutes," said Fullhouse. "Stay at it I'd better duck outside the house and do some gaycatting. Keep watch, you know, on the long shot that somebody would show up and I'd have to stall 'em. Well, don't stand there staring at me—turn that drill."

"I don't like this, Fullhouse."

"Well, do you think I'm having any picnic? Listen! What's the use of getting excited simply because we got to soup that baby? It don't make no difference what we do now—we went the route when we jimmied that window. Hop to it and let's get out of here."

He waited only until Joe had returned to his task. Then he moved slowly out of the room. At the hall, Joe thought that his steps grew a bit faster. Finally there was silence, except for the scratching of the drill and the blatter of the radio. Again Joe looked toward it and moistened his lips. Back to his drill he went, his arm turning unconsciously to the squeals of piccolos and the blare of trombones. Then he halted again and suddenly descended from the chair. As hurriedly he went to the radio, to throw the switch that would stop the annoyance of jarring notes. But with his hand on the dial, he halted.

He turned his head swiftly, looking out toward the hall. Fullhouse was not there. He swerved to the radio again. A minute passed, and two; he was crouched now, his form almost hidden in the bulk of the big instrument, as on one knee, he bent there, eager fingers turning the dials, even as his brain commanded that they desist.

Station by station the results flowed in, a jazz band blatting its swift-timed music, a woman singing, a band playing—

A band playing. Joe turned back to it and reached hurriedly for the volume control. Stronger and stronger it came in. The man sent a hand to his forehead, brushing dazedly at black, tousled hair. His lips took on a new look of grimness. Now, with a clearing of the air lanes, the music became stronger, filling the great room until it literally enfolded him:

Tinsel and spangle and fluttering tulle,
Queen of the sawdust ring.

A groan came from the throat of Joe Barry. His sweating, trembling hands reached upward as if to wrench the machine into silence. But they only remained shaking there, while the band repeated the melody, the every note pounding like the blows of a trip hammer into the brain of Joe Barry—

Then suddenly the man slumped, his sweat-lined hands grasping at the sides of the instrument. For the band had ceased. Some one was speaking across the miles.

It was the voice of Sue Dayton.

City of Immortals

The city of the Medicis, Dante, Boccaccio, Savonarola, Raphael and scores of others mighty in the Renaissance must never be passed by. No matter what your interest in life, Florence has something for you. When Bayard Taylor was there he said it was the cheapest and most charming city in Europe. He breakfasted for five cents, dined for twelve cents and saw the opera every night for ten cents in a good seat. It is yet a good city to live in, if you want to live well and at small cost. Here you can wander over the Ponte Vecehio, track some of the work of Michaelangelo, meet George Eliot's Romola, walk in the very homes of Duse, Galileo, Mrs. Browning, Amerigo Vespucci and, near the Arno, see where Shelley wrote his most famous ode.—Exchange.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SOME time this summer a gray-haired New Yorker will be setting out upon a romantic journey. For William H. Jackson, eighty-nine-year-old "pioneer photographer" and at present research secretary of the Oregon Trail Memorial association, is going to back-track on the trail of youth. Here is the way he told about it recently in announcing his plans:

"About the end of June the snows of the Rocky mountains will subside for another season and the roads will again be passable. Then I will start out on my annual trek over the Old Trail. You know, I first went over the trail back in the days of the Indians and the covered wagons with my little mule, 'Hypo,' for company. I'll use an auto this trip. It won't be much like an ox-cart for seeing the country, but it's be some better than the train. And I guess a man who could 'bullwhack' can handle a steering wheel on the Old Trail, even if he is close to four-score and ten. This time I shall go alone. But I probably will pick up various friends along the way . . . folk we have interested in our project of placing monuments and markers at the historic spots on the Trail. Last year we placed 100 from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast, and 60 more on the pony express trail of '61."

Indebted as the posterity of America will be to this association and its active gray-haired research secretary for their work in marking historic spots on the famous "highway of a westward-faring nation," the Oregon Trail, posterity is even more indebted to the work which William H. Jackson did many years ago with his camera in preserving scenes which soon passed away forever and for the work which he is still doing in preserving more of those scenes through another medium—that of brush and canvas.

Jackson was born in Keesville, a little town in the Adirondacks of New York state, in 1843. The traveling which was to characterize his whole life started early, for when he was just one year old his family moved to Georgia. They soon returned to New York but so strong was the wanderlust which became inbred in young Jackson that he refused to go to school after he had finished the eighth grade. At the age of fifteen he had only one desire and that was to draw and paint. He came naturally by that ambition, for his mother was a landscape artist and his father an experimenter in the making of daguerreotypes, the forerunners of modern photography.

"Various kinds of picture making occupied my time for a while," says Mr. Jackson. "I made family portraits; I painted landscapes on window screens, a fashion in those early days; and I painted a row of big jars as part of the scenery for a play about 'The Forty Thieves' of the Old Arabian Nights. The chief scenic artist for the local theaters gave me an approving slap on the back for my good drawing in this first attempt at scene painting.

"None of these beginnings brought in much money but they were good practice. To this hit-and-miss art training was added a few months work in the studio of a portrait painter which improved my technique somewhat."

But the opening of the Civil war put an end to this work and when Lincoln issued his call for "300,000 more" Jackson joined the Rutland Light Guards, later entering Company K, Twelfth Vermont Infantry which with other troops became the Second Vermont Brigade. As soon as Jackson's commander discovered his talent for drawing he was detailed to sketch maps of picket lines along Bull Run so at the age of nineteen he held an important and dangerous post in the Union army. After the war was over, Jackson returned to his home in the Adirondacks where for some time he was busy making photographs of the local heroes home from the war. At that time he earned what was considered a munificent sum, $25 a week. But soon the wanderlust asserted itself again and he decided to go west. He headed for Detroit but got only as far as Chicago and then worked his way on to Detroit by painting signs, teaching the art of coloring photographs and picking up other odd jobs. Eventually he got as far west as St. Joseph, Mo.

Here he secured a job of driving ox teams from Nebraska to Montana, "bull whacking" as it was called, for the wages of $20 a month. For a year, 1866 to 1867, he was engaged in this work, freighting from Nebraska City on the Missouri via Fort Kearney, Julesburg, Fort Laramie and South Pass and to the valley of the Great Salt lake.

The following quotation from a letter which young Jackson wrote to his parents dated "Great Salt Lake City, October 30, 1866," is a graphic pen picture of the life of a bullwhacker in those days. "The program of a day's work will give you some idea of the kind of a life we have been leading. In the morning, just as day is breaking and when sleep lies heaviest upon us, the night watch makes the rounds, pounding on the wagons and shouting 'Roll out! Roll out! The bulls are coming."

"Shouldering one of the heavy yokes I begin looking for my old off-wheeler. It is hardly light enough yet to distinguish objects clearly and I have some difficulty at first in telling one ox from another. But I finally get my last pointer yoked and having previously put the wheelers onto the tongue I drive around the other five yoke, connected with chains, and hitch them on ahead. I am ready to pull out, usually just as the sun is appearing above the horizon. . . .

"About ten o'clock the train is corralled, unyoking quickly done, and the cattle turned out to graze in charge of herders, and we proceed at once to get breakfast. The train is divided into four messes, the men taking turns at the various duties. This is frequently accompanied by a good deal of contentious wrangling because there are always shirkers that always fail to do their share of the work. The details bring the wood and water. The cooks for the time being bake bread in the big dutch oven, make two or three gallons of coffee, slice up half a side of bacon, find it hardly necessary to shout 'Grub pile!' for the whole mess is right there, impatiently waiting. Each one helps himself with tin cup and plate and retiring to the shady side of a wagon experiences for a brief half hour complete satisfaction.

"The afternoon drive sometimes brings us into camp so that it is quite late by the time we get supper. One of the greatest difficulties in cooking is the matter of providing fuel. Wood is scarce and along most of our route entirely lacking. The only substitute available is buffalo chips. It makes an excellent fire for cooking purposes when entirely dry, but when wet is the meanest stuff imaginable to get along with, trying the patience of the cooks to the utmost. . . .

"My heavy suppers with the great quantities of strong coffee that I drink just before going to bed frequently result in dreams that verge on nightmares. At first, when the novelty of my adventure with its attendant work and worry was uppermost in my mind I had lurid dreams almost every night and invariably they related to my team of bulls. Sometimes I imagined them out of control and about to plunge over a great precipice. Wild with terror I would tumble out of my wagon in my desperate attempt to head them off from destruction, only to be yanked back by my bed fellow or brought to my senses by the night watchman. Billy and I slept on a buffalo robe with long shaggy hair. On one occasion I began tugging at this rode so violently that I nearly threw Billy out of the wagon. Of course he was in a high dudgeon and wanted to know what I thought I was doing; dreaming still, I replied 'I can't get my confounded leaders' heads around!'"

After a year of this work, young Jackson decided he wanted to start up in the business which he knew best so he went to Omaha and in 1868 he and his brother, who had come on from the East, set up a shop with a shingle over the door which read "Jackson Brothers, Photographers." This was the period when Omaha was booming with activities connected with the building of the Union Pacific railroad. Young Mr. Jackson saw in the starting of the railroad a wonderful chance for pictures. So he left the business in the hands of his brother and started out to record what was happening.

"In those days," says Mr. Jackson, "photography was different than it is today. The pioneer photographer of that time had to be something of a chemist, artist and mechanic all put together. When he wanted to take pictures on the road he had to carry chemicals, trays, glasses and what not, for each plate had to be prepared on the spot for every exposure. So when I started out from Omaha in 1868 I was equipped with a complete portable outfit for developing pictures en route."

Dr. F. V. Hayden head of the United States geological survey of the territories, organized to obtain definite information about those vast regions opened to the settlers by the new railroad, saw the pictures which Mr. Jackson took on that trip. He liked them so much he decided he must have Jackson along on his own surveying trip which he was slated to take along the old Oregon Trail, across Wyoming and back by the Overland Stage route. Thus it came about that William H. Jackson was the first man to make photographs of the marvels of the old Oregon Trail country.

Although he was appointed official photographer of the Hayden survey, he received no salary, but his equipment was provided and he was permitted to keep all negatives he made, for his own use. Most of his photographic supplies he carried in the ambulance which accompanied the party, but he also was provided with a little donkey which he named "Hypo." "Hypo" carried his working kit.

This survey of Doctor Hayden's started in August, 1870, and from Independence Rock followed the old Oregon Mormon trail along the Sweetwater river. Returning, it followed the old Overland Stage route across southern Wyoming and at Fort Saunders disbanded for the season.

So pleased were Washington officials with the pictures taken on this first survey that they appointed Jackson to accompany future surveys as photographer and for ten years he remained with Doctor Hayden in this capacity. In 1871, he took pictures of Yellowstone. He was the first to make photographs of the marvels of this country and his pictures, as well as the discoveries of, and specimens collected, by Doctor Hayden and his party, played an important part in the creation of the Yellowstone National park in 1872. The last expedition of the Hayden Geological survey to the Rocky mountain region was made in 1878, the present United States geological survey then being instituted. Mr. Jackson accompanied this final expedition.

Having completed his work as a pioneer photographer, Mr. Jackson eventually settled in Detroit and took up photography as a business. For 25 years he was connected with the Detroit Publishing company, retiring from that company a few years ago. Since that time he has been busy writing about his experiences in the old days, making paintings from his notes and sketches and promoting the work of the Oregon Trail Memorial association. And this summer he will climax his career by one more trip over that historic route where he was once a bullwhacker and the first and outstanding member of his profession—that of photographer of the Wild West.

Red Cross First Aid, Life Saving Institutes

A. L. Schafer, manager of the Pacific Branch of the American Red Cross, announces three first aid and life saving institutes will be held in California and Washington during the summer, the first opening at Neeley's Resort on the Russian river, Sonoma county, June 5 and continuing until June 17.

The second will be at Gwinwood on Hick's Lake, near Lacey, Washington, June 12 to 24, and the third at Cabrillo Beach, the new recreation center of the city of Los Angeles at San Pedro, June 19 to July 2.

All institutes in the Pacific area are under the supervision of Edwin H. of first aid and life saving, and a Carroll, assistant national director corps of experts mobilized to give instruction.

Carroll says institute students are drawn largely from the ranks of first aid instructors in fire and police departments and industries, summer camp instructors, athletic directors, recreation supervisors, park and playground leaders, camp counselors and other professionals desiring to add to their equipment work.

Subjects to be taught include: First aid, life saving, swimming, diving, boating, canoeing, recreational swimming, camp waterfront leadership, and swimming pool leadership.

A colorful course on the production of pageants and water circuses and the conducting of water games in pools, camps and beaches will be presented to those specializing in recreational endeavors.

A Red Cross nurse will be available at each institute to safeguard the health of the students. A dean of women will supervise the comfort and welfare of the women students.

Enrollments are now being received for all three institutes in the west. Nine other institutes will be held by the Red Cross in Midwest and Eastern states.

A rifle team of Exmouth, England, composed of women hung up a score of 591 points out of a possible 600.

CONDUCTORS FOR SUMMER CONCERTS ANNOUNCED

The tentative list of conductors who will appear this summer at the Woodland Theatre to direct the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra for the Sunday afternoon concerts has just been announced by the Philharmonic Society, although at the present time it is subject to change in case of unavoidable circumstances.

Two noted conductors who have not previously appeared at these summer concerts are scheduled and two favorites of former seasons will return. Frederick Stock, the veteran conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, is coming to California to conduct for the first time, and will go to the Hollywood Bowl following his concert in the Woodland Theatre.

Sir Hamilton Harty, one of England's most distinguished conductors, who won the instant approval of the Sunday afternoon audience on the occasion of his first appearance last season, will return for a single concert, and Bernardino Molinari, the fiery Italian maestro who stirred the orchestra to inspired playing two years ago is certain to an enthusiastic reception when he returns this season.

The number of concerts will be limited to four this year, as it has been deemed expedient to give them on alternate Sundays rather than each week as formerly. The first program is announced for Sunday, June 26, there will be two in July and the final one on August 7.
